

Ravens And Leidos Host Prescription Drug Take Back

October 10, 2019

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10, 2019 /PRNewswire/ -- In support of the DEA's "National Prescription Drug Take Back Day," the 70,000 fans attending this Sunday's (Oct. 13) Baltimore Ravens game against the Cincinnati Bengals can bring unused prescription drugs and dispose of them on RavensWalk (located on the north side, Oriole Park side, of M&T Bank Stadium). Additionally, drug disposal packets will be distributed for Ravens fans to safely dispose of unused prescription drugs in the future.

The take back day is an event within the "Tackling Opioid Addiction" campaign launched by the Ravens and Leidos this season. Both are working alongside Maryland's Office of the Attorney General and the Drug Enforcement Agency for this Sunday's event, which will take place from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Disposal is free and anonymous. Maryland Attorney General Brian E. Frosh explained: "With opioid use and abuse at epidemic levels across the country, consumers should dispose of expired, unused or unwanted medicines to reduce accidental or intentional overdose or illegal abuse."

The DEA will safely dispose of all prescription drugs brought to the game. Those items that will NOT be accepted are:

- Liquids
- Needles
- Asthma Inhalers
- Mercury Thermometers
- Iodine-containing Medicines

Fans should bring only those drugs that are prescribed/controlled substances.

"This is an important and worthwhile effort that pairs private companies like ours and Leidos with government agencies to address a real-life issue, the abuse of opioid medicines in our area and across the country," Ravens president Dick Cass said.

"Disposing of prescription drugs safely during National Take Back Days or at DEA local collection sites is a simple activity that reduces the supply of unneeded opioids in our medicine cabinets," Leidos Chairman and CEO Roger Krone said.
