

National Institutes of Health Award Leidos $17 Million Contract

January 27, 2016

Solutions Company to Provide Technical Support to the NIH Center for Scientific Review

RESTON, Va., Jan. 27, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Leidos (NYSE: LDOS), a national security, health, and engineering solutions company, was awarded a task order by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) to provide software development and technical support to the NIH Center for Scientific Review (CSR). The single-award firm fixed-price follow-on contract has a six-month base period of performance, nine six-month options, and a total contract value of $17 million if all options are exercised. Work will be performed in Bethesda, Md.

The CSR is the gateway for NIH grant applications and their review for scientific merit, and is responsible for organizing the peer review groups or study sections that evaluate the majority of the research grant applications sent to NIH. Under the contract, Leidos will provide software development and technical support including developing and maintaining various web-based, desktop and mobile-based applications in support of CSR's primary mission of scientific peer review. Leidos will also provide technical support for both on premise and remote network access areas, including the installation, configuration, testing and maintenance of hardware and software.

"We are honored to continue supporting the CSR with technical excellence to provide an efficient and cost-effective peer review process, better infrastructure controls and expanded collaboration," said Jerry Hogge, Deputy Group President, Leidos Health.
