

NGA awards Leidos $107 million geospatial intelligence production contract

December 17, 2024

RESTON, Va., Dec. 17, 2024 /PRNewswire/ -- Leidos (NYSE:LDOS) today announced a new prime contract to provide geospatial intelligence (GEOINT) products to the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency's (NGA) Office of Geography and Source Strategies Office. The contract has a one-year base period of performance, four one-year optional extensions, and a final six-month optional extension. The contract has a total value $107 million if all options are exercised.

"NGA's analysts require timely and accurate foundational data to facilitate effective analysis in support of current mission requirements," said Roy Stevens, Leidos National Security Sector president. "Our geographic and topographic data products help enable analysts to support warfighters and national security objectives with precision."

Under the contract, Leidos will provide human geographic, topographic, and open-source data products to enhance day-to-day operations for NGA's cartographers, human geographers, toponymists, catalogers, and collectors. The Leidos team will also provide GEOINT products for NGA's Geographic Names Server.
